Winter Break Reading Challenge

Want to engage more students this holiday. We have you covered with the Sora Winter Break Reading Challenge. It’s our gift to you and your gift to your students. Send them home knowing they can jump into a dreamy fantasy, drift off to a distant world, find boldness in strong characters, fall in love, or learn about someone new. Download your Holiday Marketing kit here.
Sora has tools to support all readers

Did you know that Sora has tools to help support all our diverse readers? With Sora, we want to meet the needs of our readers and encourage reading for all!

Sora has unique accessibility options for diverse readers. With Sora, students can choose a high-contrast mode, open dyslexic font, or even use their screen readers based on their needs. You can find out more about these tools here.

Sora also has an option for a multi-lingual interface for readers that don’t have English as their native language. Users can change the language of their interface by going to the three-lined settings menu and choosing Language. When using the Sora app on a personal device, Sora can also intuitively pick up a device’s set language within the app to display.

Best Books 2021

We’ve been waiting and are excited to share the top picks from School Library Journal for 2021! “After months of deliberation the committee members have selected 139 titles as the best books for children and teens published this year.” Read the article here. This year’s SLJ best books include: Firekeeper’s Daughter by Indigenous author Angeline Boulley, which has been optioned by Netflix in conjunction with Higher Ground Productions (helmed by President Barack Obama and Michelle Obama), Born on the Water (The 1619 Project), a children’s picture book exploration of themes Nikole Hannah-Jones brought to life in her Pulitzer Prize winning journalism The 1619 Project, as well as, Last Night at the Telegraph Club by Malinda Lo, which was recently awarded the 2021 National Book Award for Young People’s Literature. The list of great reads goes on and features graphic novels, nonfiction, and a little something for everyone. Your Sora team has curated this collection for you!

Results from our 1st Sora Talk

On November 22 & 23rd, your OverDrive Team hosted live Sora Talks Q&A sessions. The goal of this was to answer questions, share a Sora product demonstration and find out from our member schools what’s needed from your OD team. Here were the top questions asked with the corresponding responses.

- How to connect to the Public Library?
  - Learn how in these step-by-step instructions
- Ways to market and promote Sora
  - There are tons of resources to help you promote. Find Delaware customized templates here. Find even more resources here.
- Sharing Direct links for collections and titles
  - Delaware teachers do not assign titles to students, instead they can embed links to titles to their students or add them as assets in their curriculum modules. Learn how here
- How Sora support languages other than English?
  - Yes, Sora does support multiple languages, you can set your language preference via "Settings" in Sora.
- Does Sora have titles in languages other than English?
  - Yes, Sora includes titles in other languages, specifically Spanish, Chinese, and French. Learn how to search in Sora here.
- Should younger students be seeing upper grade level content?
  - Sora has content access levels built in. What this means for you, is that the right book should be reaching the right student. By default, K-5 readers should only see juvenile leveled content, 6-8 readers should see juvenile & young adult leveled content and 9-12/staff will see all content. Learn more about content access levels here.
- How can I search for content?
  - There are many ways to search for titles in Sora, you can simply browse by scrolling down the page, you can click on the collections tab, or search the available subjects. You can even search for a specific title using the search bar. Other ways are to use the Advanced Search function, where you can search by Lexile level, subject, interest, language and more. Learn how to search in Sora here.
- Advanced Search using reading levels
  - As shared above, you can search on multiple topics or themes. If you are searching for a specific criterion on behalf of your students, you can also share the results with them by Step 1: perform search, Step 2: copy the URL link of the shared results. Step 3: Paste & share the URL of the shared results with your students.

Thanks for reading!
